UNEXPECTED
FEELING of grief

After a loss, it's not uncommon for people to experience grief. Grief is not limited to experiences with death. Grief can manifest from the loss of a job, a move away from close friends, a divorce, or a tough breakup.

David Kessler, the author of Finding Meaning: The Sixth Stage of Grief, highlights this concept in an article done by Harvard Business Review. Due to the pandemic, "we're feeling a number of different griefs. We feel the world has changed, and it has." To process and cope with these losses, you must understand grief itself.

The loss of normalcy; the fear of economic toll; the loss of connection. This is hitting us and we're grieving. Collectively. We are not used to this kind of collective grief in the air.

COPING WITH GRIEF

- Talk about it. Many people deny grief which can cause isolation and may make it more difficult to accept.
- Experience and accept feelings. Feelings of sadness, anger, numbness, etc. are all normal. Experience them to accept them.
- Adjust to the new "normal." Try to keep your routine as close as possible as it was before. This will create a sense of comfort.
- Prioritize self-care. Focus on your eating habits, exercise and sleep. Try Mindful Meditation to also help.

Take care of your mental health and well-being. You don't have to do it alone.
